

Release Date:24/09/2007

History Detectives 5th October
at 7.30 pm on BBC2.

Milton Keynes own doyens of the current 1940s retro scene Amanda and Craig where asked if they could find a family artefact for the new series of the BBC2 History Detectives.

A search through Craig's Grandfathers papers found a photograph of a train crash from the 1920s but no-one in Craig's family knew why this photo was amongst his Grandfathers papers.

The only possible link the family knew was that Craig's late grandfather was a train driver based in the city of Hull, but no one knew why he kept a photo of the crash. Indeed the TV company still have not told Amanda and Craig the story behind the photo, so they will have to watch on the 5th October to find out the history of the train crash and the photograph.

Craig says, "Although my Grandfather died when I was 12 he was a big influence on my life, so being able to find something out about him is really wonderful".

Craig and Amanda were asked to contribute to the programme because of their passion for the mid 20th Century history. They have been fortunate to have appeared as historical characters all over the country at schools, museums and on television.

Links

<http://mysite.orange.co.uk/homefrontfriends>

Craig and Amanda Home Front Friends website

<http://www.open2.net/historydetectives/nutshell.html>

BBC History Deceives website